Best introduction to Gouache: Goisch 101 Minnie Small This tutorial explores not only what it is and how you should use it, but also which brushes and paper are best suited to the medium. Before embarking on a new painting project, the first step will be to properly prepare your canvas. Instructor Catherine Lanfranco, who teaches painting at Hunter College in New York, uploaded two free videos to her YouTube channel (canvas stretching and Canvas Priming coverage) to successfully establish the basis of your picture. Both tutorials are really about best practices to create an effective canvas. Lanfranco guides you through the materials you'll need to customize, including ruler, scissors, stretchers or bars, and will guide you clearly through the process of properly cutting the blade and attaching it to the bars. Priming happens further: using gesso will create a flexible surface that gets the paint well and allows you to spread it out more efficiently. Lanfranco outlines materials for the process, including hesso, hesso brush and sandpaper (to polish the surface after each layer so that the blade is smooth and ready to paint) - and takes you step by step with easy-to-act instructions. By the end of the course you will have a canvas ready for painting. Interested in trying or working to refine your acrylic painting skills? On his YouTube channel, artist Will Kemp writes and creates his own videos on classical painting techniques, with acrylic paint. Whether you're just starting out or having a more ambitious project in mind, Will's video will showcase different strategies for the medium. Get started with simple foundation building blocks, including proper acrylic brush cleaning, acrylic brush selection, acrylic coloured platform application and colour mixing base. Along with various videos about proper color mixing, Will will also set you up with a series of painting lessons - ranging from a beginner to a more advanced skill set. Study the basics of painting still life with multipurpose novices acrylic methods of still life, get the knowledge of techniques of light and shade, as well as try your hand at acrylic landscape painting, a palette of knife technicians, portraits, picturesque sky, floral still lifes and even painting in the style of Claude Monet. And the best part: It's all free. Watercolors have a reputation for complex painting discipline. This Beginner Watercolours course on Udemey will build confidence for new artists by providing you with tools to master basics and presenters with a playful approach to the medium. All you need to start with is a box of watercolor paints, one round tip, watercolor paper, black ink or felt pen, pencil, eraser, transparent or white wax candle or chalk, and two cans of water. Created by Nicola A. Blakemore, the course (about $100) includes four hours of on-demand video, and you can even access course materials on a TV or mobile phone. The purpose of the --- is to teach you how watercolors work with water and how to use this effectively. Blakemore's class guides you through understanding the principle of color washing, how the same colors can create shape and shading, how you can create glare and shadows with watercolor paints, and how to mix paints correctly. Founded in 1929, the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA) has some of the most famous contemporary paintings in the world. While visitors lined up to see Vincent Van Gogh's Starry Night or workshops from Jackson Pollock and Willem de Kooning, the museum now has online programming that you can access at home. While MoMA offers plenty of free online courses exploring a variety of artistic disciplines, the studio: Postwar abstract painting focuses on the materials, techniques and conceptual processes of seven New York school artists: de Kooning, Pollock, Yayoi Kusama, Agnes Martin, Barnett Newman, Ad Reinhardt and Mark Rothko. The no-cost course is set so you can work at your own pace and on your own schedule. Your instructor will guide you through demonstrations in the studio and gallery of passage, and assign reading to give context to the great cultural, intellectual and historical events that shaped these artists after World War II. The class also includes a variety of additional studio exercises for which you will need art supplies. They will hopefully provide inspiration for abstract paintings. Interested in making a breakthrough in the style that created leonardo da Vinci Mona Lisa and Pablo Picasso Les Femmes d'Alger? Oil painting uses pigments with dried oils as sips such as flaxseed or poppy oil. If you're a beginner, French artist Florent Farges has various video tutorials on his YouTube channel to help you get the ball rolling with your oil painting instructions. The headlights follow the teachings of the atelier method from the 19th century. The best place to start - oil painting for beginners, which is free. Here, Florent strives for simplicity. Here are all the questions you might think, such as Why use oil paint?, Is oil paint more complex? and Is oil paint more toxic?, as well as a step-by-step demonstration of painting. Once you get comfortable with the basics, there are still plenty of tutorials you can choose from, including specific videos about oil painting drying time, pigments and palettes, settings for painting plein air, and of course tips on your oil painting game. Understanding color theory is a critical skill for any artist. Not only does it explain the relationship between colors, but it is also key to understanding their combinations. When it comes to painting, color theory and mixing paints go hand in hand. While there are a huge number of scholarships available on the theme of color theory itself (see Josef Albers's fundamental Color Interaction), getting hands-on use with your paints in your home studio will also open your eyes to how it works on canvas. Jeanette Jobson's Free Color Theory - Video Basics is a great introduction to mixing using a split main palette. This palette uses two shades of each primary color (red, yellow and blue) - with one warm and one cool shade. Jobson makes clear many terms related to color and mixing, including color bias. She strolls you through what exactly that means and how each shade of paint illustrates this- with an assortment of shades in her palette. Jobson then begins his demonstration of mixing: a crash course in a nuanced process that is sure to set you up for success. Gouash are water carriers with heavier pigment loads than watercolor, and thus designed to be more opaque. In this video, artist Minnie Small breaks down the basics of gouache. This tutorial explores not only what it is and how you should use it, but also which brushes and paper are best suited for the medium. If you have experience with watercolors, gouash could be the next style of painting you want to play with. As Small explains in the free video, many of the tools you'll use for watercolor, such as a brush type, will also work for gouache. Minnie illustrates the different opacity of the paint, as well as its variety of useful properties, including its velvety matte finish, rapid drying time and the fact that it can be restored with water after drying. So, if you want to save save on the part of the finished picture, you can remake it with ease. When choosing the best online painting classes, several factors came into play. First, painting is an environment with a huge variety of styles. Our goal was to represent as many of them as possible, whether it was oil painting, watercolor, gouash or acrylic. In addition, we aimed to choose technical classes that would set you up for success in your painting journey, such as how to stretch and prime your canvas or the basics of mixing colors that distinguished yourself as important learning building blocks. Finally, suitability was key. All the classes on this list are textbooks led by artists or instructors who clearly know their belongings and are able to communicate the intricacies of their environment in a clear, concise and intuitive fashion for you at home.
